

At left—Warm American clothes have brought smiles to these two destitute German children in Berlin. Thousands of others are not so lucky. Underwood & Underwood.

Special outdoor school at West Newton, Mass., where the youngsters are so warmly clad that the most rigorous winter day is not too severe for them. Copyright, Underwood & Underwood.

This little Vermont girl has nationwide fame because of her memory. Though only 4 years old, Dorothy Le Roy of Windsor can repeat long verses, sentences in foreign languages and name all the Presidents, &c. Copyright, Underwood & Underwood.

At left—John Sloan, president of the Society of Independent Artists, at work on his painting "The Sabbath Breakers." He is an ardent enemy of blue laws. Copyright, Keystone View.

Mr. and Mrs. John Drinkwater, who have come to America for the presentation of Mr. Drinkwater's two new historical plays, "Oliver Cromwell" and "Mary Queen of Scots." As the writer of "Abraham Lincoln" Drinkwater became widely known here.

Count L. Szechenyi, husband of the former Miss Gladys Vanderbilt, photographed aboard the Rotterdam on his arrival in New York. Copyright, Underwood & Underwood.

Thousands of Greek refugees at Batoum, the Black Sea port, are living in hovels such as these. Starvation and disease are killing scores daily, and even the well-equipped Near East Relief despairs of saving them. These people formerly lived in Asia Minor and sought to repatriate themselves.